

The Marriage Trap: A Love for All Seasons Novella

When Miss Patience Findley discovers, at her first ball of her first Season, just how much her fathers scandal has affected her chances of marriage, she resigns herself to being alone and dying a spinster. That is, until she hears that her friends names have landed in the Betting Book at Whites. In a moment of desperation, she asks her reprobate cousin to place a bet on her behalf, in hopes of trapping an unsuspecting gentleman into marriage. Tristan Wallford, Lord Swaffham, loves a good challenge. So when his friend, Rowan Findley, claims that his cousin Patience cannot be cured of her melancholy state, Tristan lays a bet that he will be the one to cure her. He could certainly use the money, after all. But as the game begins, Tristan begins to realize that not only does Miss Findley not need curing, but she might be worth trapping for himself.
