

Evergreen Woman (Evergreen Series Book 2)

Francis Clegg shortened to Fran, had willingly given up a life of success and riches to marry a Lakeland farmer. She had moved out of London to live on a hill farm as a farmers wife. Fran was rich, very rich, but had to hide her wealth from her husband because of his old-fashioned idea that he should support her. There were many incidents that affected her life. As time went by she could no longer hide from her husband her wealth and desire to develop an enterprise of her own. The company which she had left as CEO, tried to woo her back to manage a new project in the Lakes, tempting her back into their organisation against her husband wishes. The book is the second in the Evergreen series. The first Evergreen Girl details the early life of Fran and her rise to success. Evergreen Woman charts her later life and her struggles in a rural setting.
